

King George and Queen Mary visiting the American Eagle Y. M. C. A. Hut in the Strand. They admired the community work carried on there and commended the officers in charge. Photo shows guard of honor of American naval and military officers.

(Photo by Central News Photo Service.)

A bell from some French town hall or village headquarters mounted on an empty shell and serving as an alarm of gas attacks.

(Photo by Press Illustrating Service, Inc.)

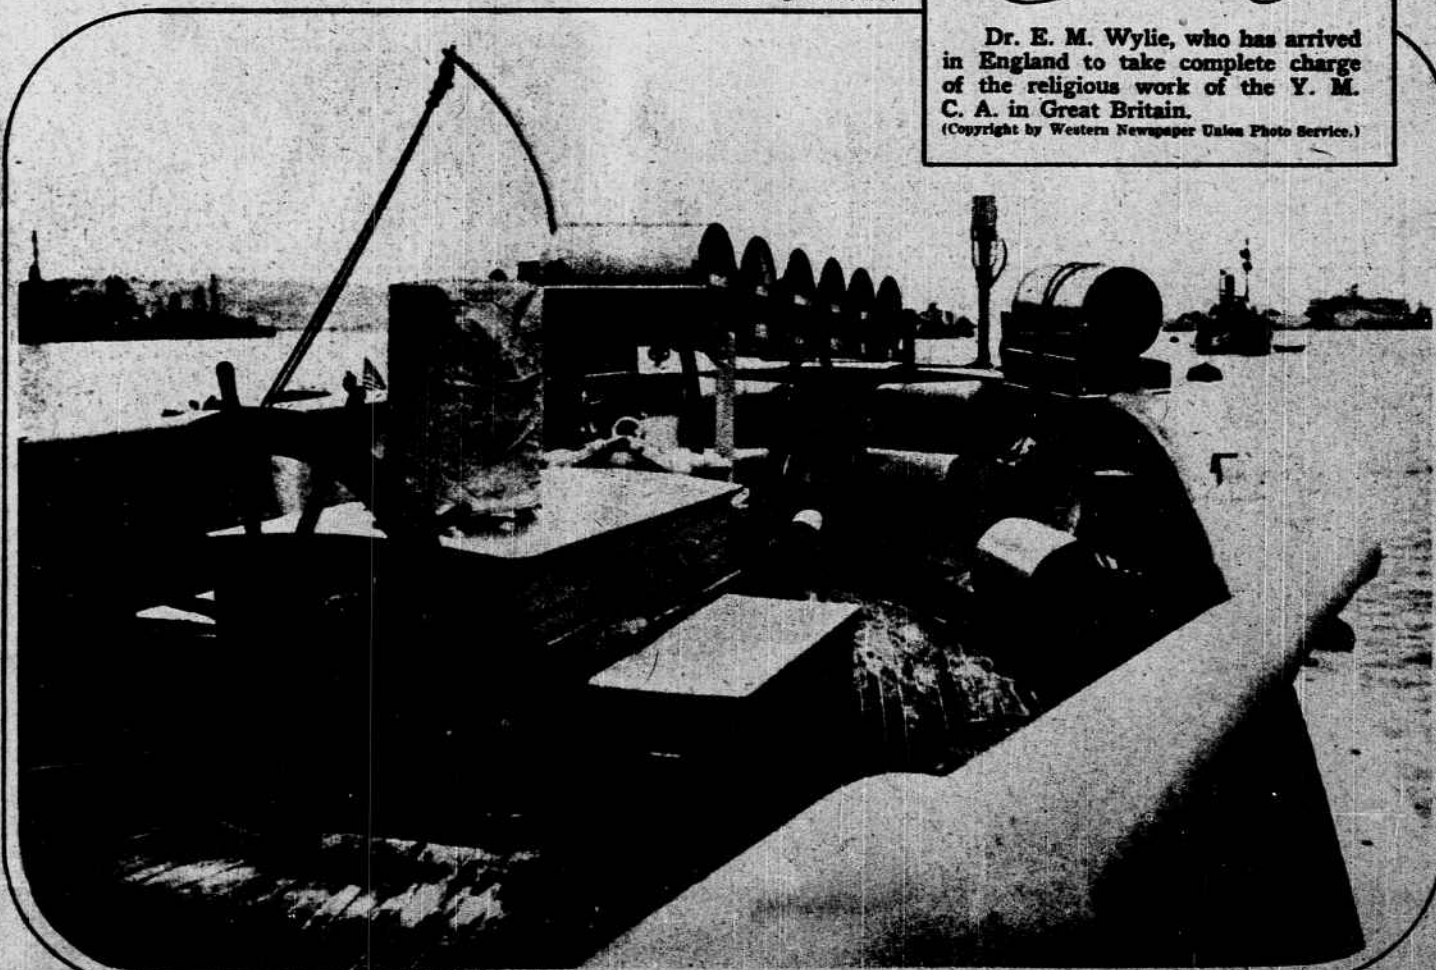

A British anti-aircraft gunner at work. His gun is fixed to a revolving wagon wheel, which enables him to follow the movements of the enemy plane with greater ease.

(Photo by Press Illustrating Service, Inc.)

The mayor of Yokohama presenting a message of greeting to Prince Arthur of Connaught at the railway terminal of the harbor. Prince Arthur, on his important mission to Japan, was welcomed by a great crowd in Tokio, where he presented to the emperor the baton of a field marshal in the British army and a message from King George.

(Copyright by Western Newspaper Union Photo Service.)

Depth bombs aboard American patrol boat "somewhere in foreign waters." In the stern of the boat can be seen the bombs, ready to be released at a second's notice. It is these bombs that have proven so effective against the Hun U-boat.

(Copyright by Underwood & Underwood.)

King George is now a devout base ball fan. This picture shows the king talking with Arlie Latham, veteran base ball coach and player, who is now in England supervising and arranging base ball games.

(Photo by International Film Service.)